

PACAL VOTAN

The Avatar Pacal Votan was a great culture bearer to the Mayan people of the Yucatan Peninsula and ancient America. He resided in the holy city of Palenque, which was built in the center of a triangular grid between the 3 points of Chichen-Itza, Tres Zapotes and Kaminaljuyu.

Palenque and Pacal Votan's Temple of the Inscriptions is often compared to the Egyptian Pyramids of Giza for several intriguing reasons. One is that both ancient sites are situated in the center of the geological landmass of their perspective hemisphere, resulting in a perfect balance of male and female energy.

Pacal Votan was a teacher of great wisdom and performed healing miracles. It is said that he came from across the sea to the shores of the Yucatan from his homeland called Valum Chivim. He spoke of a race that lived on a distant continent that catastrophically sunk into the depths of the sea. Pacal Votan was adept in 'time travel' and was/is able to maneuver through the tunnels of time and the 13 dimensions. This should not seem so incomprehensible when today's quantum physicists are discussing string theory and wormholes.

In ancient times, initiates would travel from remote regions to climb the steps of the Temple of Inscriptions and receive the teaching and spiritual guidance of Pacal Votan. Prophecies indicate that one-day initiates will hear the call and return once again to this sacred site for spiritual instruction.

There have been numerous conjectures about the meaning of the intricately carved hieroglyphs on the sarcophagus lid of Pacal Votan, including Von Daniken's highly popular and off the mark spaceman- sitting-in-a-spaceship theory. The keepers of ancient Mayan wisdom would have no problem agreeing that Pacal Votan was a star being. However, the message left in stone must go deeper than just depicting a Mayan Lord playing with the control panel of a spacecraft. The message that he left in stone is a treasured gift...a reminder that we too, have the potential to become fully realized beings of light.
